WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 10, 1881. THE CLAM. BY GEORGE W. KIRCHWEY.

> The clam of all the birds that swim And fish that cleave the air, Both first of all, both great and small, Adorn the bill of fare,

> In stew or fry, or wet or dry, In fritter, shell, or bake, Nor lamb, nor jam, nor ham, nor yam. From clam can take the cake.

He adds new cheer to lager beer, Let him be fresh or "high;" He's boss with ale, and gin cock-tail, And Tolu rock and rye. Where skips the festive ram, Let others sing the fields of spring My pean high will rend the sky With three cheers for the clam! FEMALE FACTS.

-"Picture conundrum" is a game which requires no apparatus but a pencil and a slip of paper. The first player draws a picture and folds the slip so as to hide it. The second writes a guess as to what the picture is; the third does the same, and, when all have written, the list is read aloud.

-The dowry of Whitelaw Reid's bride, is greater than that of the Princess Stephanic, who being $450,000, while Mr. D. O. Mills made his daughter a wedding gift of a cheek for half a

SAVE YOUR CURTAINS. How to Care for Them During the Summer Season.

A good housekeeper, Mrs. Henry Ward Reccher, makes some excellent suggestions about drying curtains on frames. She says many pin a d room and pin the curtains onto the sheet. This never gives pin the curtains onto the sheet. This never gives a clear color, because there is no free circulation of air beneath. An easier and better way is to keep on hand four strips of these boards, about three inches wide, made on the principle of quilting three inches wide, made on the principle of quilting frames, with holes at suitable distances to increase or diminish the length and breadth to suit the size of the curtains, and strong wooden pins to put rough the holes to fasten the frames together. ack clo-ely strips of cloth, selvage edge out, or ide tape, the whole length of the bars. Then the stand on chairs so that they will stand firm I steady outdoors of a still, bright, sunny day, and pin or paste the curtains to the tapes, pulling out and fastening every point in the lace. Several tains may be stretched at a time, though they look clearer if done singly.

REPORT WEITING THE CURTAINS their length and breadth should be marked on the frame. They should first be tacked at the ends, and then stretched to meet the measures of the width. The whole process of washing, scalding, and stretching should be done as expeditiously as is consistent with thorough work, for no other cotton material sbrinks so easily, and lace cannot be stretched when dry. The approved method of washing lace curtains is to first shake all dust out of them when taken down: then spread them neross two lines stretched near to-gether in the clothes-yard, and brush them softly with a clean feather duster. When this has been lone, put them one at a time into a tub half full of skewarm water, and add two tables poonfuls of quid ammonia. Let them remain ten or fifteen minutes, turning them over carefully every minute or two, and squeezing with the hands. Have ready another tub of ammonia water: squeeze the curtain dry and put to soak in this while another curtain is taken through the same process as the first, and so on till all have been taken through at least three waters, or till the water looks clear, SQUEEZING AND WASHING the curtains as the work goes on. They may now be starched and blued and pinned in shape: or, if on are very thorough, place them in a coarse allow-slip, and scald in clean soap suds for a few minutes. When first put in let the water be but tepid. If the ecru tint is desired, "coffee" the rinsing water, instead of bluing it, and experimen with a bit of old lace till you get just the right hue, remembering that, as the curtains will hang against

The Official Transfers of Yesterday as Rethe light, a deep tint is necessary to show at all. Washed and dried, with this careful attention to details, there is no reason that the draperies should not look "amaist as weel's the new," and, following these precepts, the amateur may rival the pro-fessionals who "do up" laces.—Clara De Vere m

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. Drs. Thomas Addison and Douglass Forrest, from 514 Fifth street northwest, this (Tuesday) afternoon at four o'clock. deceased was the eldest daughter of Hon. David The deceased was the eigest daughter of the P. Holloway. She was confined to her bed for over five months, during which time she was reduced from the months, during which time she was reduced from the months of physical womanhood to a five months, during which time she was reduced from a magnificent specimen of physical womanhood to a mere skeleton, and, while she was a great sufferer, she had no desire, want, or wish that was not gratified, and everything that medical skill or science could suggest, or loving hands find to do, was done to alleviate her pain and suffering. The devotion of a fond husband, the relatives, friends, and associates of her girlhood and school-days was constant, unremitting, and angelie in its character, while the patience and Christian fortitude with which she bore her sufferings through these long and weary months was remarkthrough these long and weary months was remarkable, and won the love and regard of all to whose knowledge it came. It seems hard that one so young and full of life and hope, and who gave promise of a useful career, should be thus stricken down and removed at its beginning. But there is no escape from the decrees of the Almighty. The old and the young, the rich and the poor must alike bow to His will.

As a cloud of the sunset, slow melting in Heaven, As a star that is lost when the daylight is given, As a glad dream of shunber which wakens in bliss, She hath passed to the world of the holy from this. *
